Business Change. Last week the Hillsboro public wer urprised by the announcement that Mr. Isaac Rhoades had sold his extensive business establishment - tannery and leather store-to his three sons, Cary, Zack and George Rhoades, all of whom are well known here. Mr. Rhoader thus closes a business career of more than forty-seven years. How successful it was the public well know. The new firm, Rhoades Bros'., will extend and enlarge the business, giving to it their personal supervision and time. They will furnish the best quality of leather and findings to be found in the market at market price for hides and bark. The firm as energetic business men is sufficient guaranty that no pains will be spared to gain the public favor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Strange, celebrated the 10th anniversary of their wedded life last Friday afternoon, August 27th. Supper was served from 5 to 8 o'clock. There were seventy-four guests present and all seemed to enjoy the occasion, which was one long to be remembered. The supper was immensely grand, the music splendid. Some of Sam Jones' camp meeting music was rendered by some of our home talent and made the time pass very pleasantly. Quite a number were out on the lawn playing croquet, and, in fact, every one present had a good time. Mr. and Mrs. Strange received quite a number of valuable presents. May they celebrate every anniversary from the tin to the diamond is the wish of their many friends. Rev. L. M. Dr. W. J. Srofe and J. W. Henderson attended the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at Zanesville last week. On the 37th day of March the Grand Lodge officers offered a seventy-five dollar silk banner to the lodge that would show the largest per cent. of increase by August 21st, also a fifteen dollar badge and charm to the member who would recommend the greatest number of acceptable applicants. When the returns were all in it was found that Centennial Lodge, No 59, of Lynchbarg, was entitled to the banner and that J. W. Henderson was entitled to the sanner and that J. W. Henderson was entitled to the sentence of the order artistically carved on one side and the presentation by the Grand Lodge on the other. The banner is one of the finest we have seen and is quite a compliment to Centennial Lodge, considering the large number of Lodges competing for it. A formal presentation of the banner to the Lodge will turn out in full dress and march with the tanner through the principal streets, headed by the Bayless Band, to the school grove, where the presentation will be made. Short addresses will be delivered. All members of the lodge and other lodges are requested to be present. All citizens are cordially invited.

The ball at night was a more signal fallure. This speaks is well for the moral standing of our community. There has been quite an excitement in our usually quiet village the past week, caused by a dispute between Ass Cordray and his father in-law, James Boatright, regarding the custody of Cordray's child, whose mother died this spring. The child had been left with its grand-parents, (who, it may be said, were in very needy circumstances) until about one week ago, when Cordray, having found a good home for his child, took him from Boatright's and, before starting for the urchin's future home, lodged him for a time at a neighbor's house. Boatright, during Cordray's absence, took the child back to his own home. Cordray no sconer learned this than he made preparation to take the child by law. But, on a second reflection decided to try the eld and time-tried law of force. So, summoning some muccular aid, he succeeded in regaining his natural property.
